VIOLENT UNION ACTION DESTRUCTIVE TO UNIONS

Threatened Resistance of Railroad Board Award Lawless; Murder by Unions Their Loss.

Notwithstanding frequent assertions that the American people are showing a tendency to look with leniency upon lawlessness the fact remains that the average American people are the most law abiding of any in the world. They recognize as the fundamental principal of American institutions that this is a government by law and not by men, and that liberty depends absolutely upon the maintenance and enforcement of law. This being true there can be no hope for ultimate success of a general railroad strike in defiance of the decision of the Railroad Labor Board in the matter of railroad wages.

"It may be readily admitted that perhaps the Railroad Labor Board in its decision did not reach exact justice is possible so long as human infirmities continue. But it may be safely asserted that the decision of that Board, after due consideration of all the facts and circumstances, is far nearer approach to justice than can be attained by any other methods or through any other agency. In the reduction of wages, which have been ordered, there is just as much probability that the cuts were too small as that they were too great. Undoubtedly members of the Board did what they thought was right in an effort to award the railroad workers just compensation, with due regard to the cost of living, compensation paid in other lines of industry, the character of the work, and the ability of the industry to pay.

However that may be, the fact remains that the Railroad Labor Board is a lawfully established tribunal of adjudication; it proceeded with its work in a lawful manner; it reached a decision which stands as the expression of the will of the American people and that decision is entitled to the same respect as any other decision by any other governmental tribunal.

In an effort to substitute law procedure for the force and violence of a strike or a lockout, and in the endeavor to protect the interests of the people from the conflicting interests of employers and employees, Congress passed the law which provided for the adjudication of railroad disputes. That the law is not perfect or its administration perfect is quite likely, but it is the best that has been accomplished for the general welfare. It substitutes legal decisions based upon evidence in the place of agreements by arbitrary power on the one hand or exacted under threat of distress and devastation on the other. The country is presented, therefore, with the question whether it will be governed by lawful procedure or by mob rule. There can be no question whatever as to the position the great body of American people will take.

A railroad strike may be called, but, if called, it will mark the beginning of the end of the organizations responsible for defiance of law and disregard of the public welfare.

Chairman Ben. W. Hooper, of the Railroad Board, has made the statement that if the railroad trainmen strike they will take a step that will mean tremendous losses to the organization in that it will practically mean the destruction of their order.

Whether or not Mr. Hooper has stressed the situation too strongly it is difficult—one might say impossible—to tell, but that the organization will be seriously injured there can be no doubt.

It is well understood and admitted by organized labor heads that membership in various organizations of labor have shrunk greatly within the past two years. That condition is very logical for the average laborer is just as honest, just as fair, just as reasonable as the capitalist and he understands that many of the demands of organized labor have been very unreasonable for the past two years and rather than be a party to such a course thousands of laboring men have ceased to be members of the various labor organizations.

Now, in the face of this condition the union miners at Herrin, Illinois, captured and killed some twenty-five or more nonunion miners. The killing, too, was done in the worst possible spirit and thus the way was opened for organized labor to pay a tremendous damage bill, some may hang, others may serve long sentences in the penitentiary and organized labor has aroused the opposition of thousands who were in sympathy with them until this last outrage.

Never can there or will there be peace, safety and right conditions until the theory that any man shall have perfect and unmolested freedom to work for whom he pleases, when he pleases and for such a wage as he pleases is upheld. Anything else is un-American and can never be maintained.
